Fall

When we met again in fall trees were crying in the rain So we wove the golden leaves where children would remain.
If I think of yesterday,
I can well remember fall.

Winter

Winter's gull at last has cried to sea
calling for the sailor
who is far away
and the child lost
on a subway.
Hear his plea?
Oh yes, do we.
And echo, too,
our own refrain
to let them know that we do
love them well ...
and they be not
vacant and deserted.

Spring

It all begins with friends and has no
rhyme and no
finish.
Let it be as such
for now and for a long, long time.

Class of 1975

Time to say we almost met
Time to think how close our lives came—but not close enough.
How many are there at the touch
who shy away
with not a try
nor friendly word?
It might have been
a closer bond,
but no one knew—
or maybe no one tried.

Funny how one forgets until now ... and it rushes by at bullet speed,
allowing just a touch,
and then it's gone.
